About Me

I began programming at the age of 13 and have been passionate about technology and software development ever since. Along the way, I've designed and built several practical projects—among them a personal finance management app, a trading-bot management system, a technical blog, and a portfolio website. Self-directed, continuous learning is one of my greatest strengths, and I'm constantly expanding my knowledge in areas such as web development and artificial intelligence. I'm seeking opportunities where I can contribute to creative, challenging projects and add genuine value to both the team and the final product.
